Official: FBI gave $25,000 to van der Sloot

The FBI paid Joran van der Sloot $25,000 in an undercover investigation of a plot to extort money from Natalee Holloway's mother, a federal law enforcement official told CNN on Wednesday.

van der Sloot

The FBI and U.S. Attorneys Office in Alabama arranged for a meeting where an undercover agent paid van der Sloot $10,000 in cash and another $15,000 in a wire transfer for information van der Sloot allegedly promised would lead to Holloway's body in Aruba, a source familiar with the case said.

It's unclear if that money funded van der Sloot's trip to Colombia and into Peru where authorities said he confessed this week to killing 21-year-old Stephany Flores.

Van der Sloot, a Dutch citizen, twice was arrested in connection with the 2005 disappearance of Holloway but was released for lack of evidence.

The information van der Sloot provided to the FBI was not true, according to an Interpol document obtained Wednesday by CNN.

This week Alabama authorities filed extortion and wire fraud charges against van

On or about March 29, van der Sloot contacted a representative of Holloway's mother, Beth Holloway, the Interpol document states.

That came as a shock to Natalee Holloway's father, Dave Holloway.

CNN spoke with Dave Holloway's attorney, Vinda de Sousa, in Aruba on Wednesday.

"Shocked, saddened," the attorney said when asked if he knew about the deal.

Van der Sloot and Beth Holloway's representative met in Aruba, where a payment of $10,000 was made to him, followed by a transfer of $15,000 to a personal bank account in the Netherlands, the Interpol document states.

In exchange, van der Sloot showed the representative a house where Natalee Holloway's remains supposedly were, according to the document. When records showed that the house wasn't even built at the time of her disappearance, van der Sloot admitted he lied, Interpol said.

My yard will be the death of me

Medusa was back—and after my family.

Not the Gorgon from Greek mythology. Rather her namesake, the plant/monster that climbs up the side of an archway at the entrance to our backyard and then coils above it in an unruly mass that warns outsiders: You are entering the home of people who have little to no control over their lives.

I don't blame Medusa alone for our state of affairs. I blame the entire plant kingdom.

If there's one thing I've learned since owning a backyard full of weeds, it's that I'd rather there were bears back there. You can stop bears by chopping off their heads. Or, more cruelly, by naming an underperforming sports team after them so they slink away in shame.

But you can spend entire weekends in your yard hacking away at every protruding green thing. It doesn't matter. They will return. It will end in tears. These tears will land on the protruding green things, causing them to grow more.

Sometimes the things aren't green. We have mushrooms in one corner. They grow in a ring. It looks like a mushroom cult. One day I'll return home to see they've convinced my impressionable young son to ioin them.

We also have a 3-foot-by-2-foot ant colony. My wife tried all-natural remedies, which involved sprinkling on the colony types of food no ants except the ones in our yard can tolerate. Now we still have ants but not much food.

So we decided to buy ant poison, which should just be called "poison." The warning label essentially tells you to wear a Hazmat suit. I've been selected as the person in my family to administer the poison, but I am stalling until I reach an age at which I don't mind

People talk about becoming "one with nature." The people who say that don't have yards. When I'm out there, in 90-degree heat with the Hazmat gear on, there's no oneness. I pretend I hear the plants screaming as I bring my garden shears to their necks. My only regret is they don't bleed.

But the last laugh is always on me. We gave Medusa a trim this spring. A month later, she hadn't just grown back, she'd let herself hang down. And she was usually wet. Passing by her, which we did every day, was like walking through a car wash.

Last weekend, we went to Minnesota, where people like nature. Maybe the plants were kinder, we hoped.

My in-laws, meanwhile, who had fled the Soviet Union, paid a visit to Medusa.

They destroyed her.

I opened the bag containing her remains this morning. "I'm sorry,"

To which she hissed, "Not as sorry as you will be a month from

Don't be surprised if you soon see mayhem in Chicago. A massive emergency response exercise is scheduled for the area beginning Sunday and continuing through June 17.

The practice events spread over five days will include a simulated commercial airplane crash, a simulated rail-car evacuation and a simulated terrorist attack.

Road closures and detours are possible.

"It is a full-scale exercise, so residents can expect to see emergency responders looking and acting as if this was a real homeland security/domestic response mission," the Illinois Army and Air National Guard said in

The exercise will begin Sunday with a simulated jetliner crash in Oak Lawn,

"with debris and mass casualties scattered throughout the area," said Maj. Gen. William Enyart of the Illinois National Guard.

On Wednesday, the Bensenville area also will be the site of numerous simulated terrorist attacks "including takedowns of suspected terrorists," simulated building collapses and mass decontamination and medical care by the National Guard.

At the same time, Rush University Medical Center in Chicago will receive "suspected biological agent patients to decontaminate and medically evaluate."

On Wednesday evening, the CTA will stage a rail-car evacuation SWAT incident at 15th and Clark streets. Police K-9 units will detect "simulated explosives manufactured by a terrorist group on a CTA train.

Humboldt Park has seen three homicides in the past week, including a double homicide, which brought its 2010 homicide total to 15 deaths, the most of any community area, a RedEye analysis of police data found.

Two men were shot to death Tuesday in the 3600 block of West Ohio Street, police said. A 15-year-old was killed last week in the 4200 block of West Thomas Avenue.

On Wednesday, a double homicide was logged in Grand Boulevard, officials said. Citywide, gunshot deaths were recorded in Auburn Gresham, Belmont Cragin, Calumet Heights, Englewood, Irving Park, the Near West Side, South Chicago, South Shore and West Garfield Park in the last week.

Sixteen homicides have been recorded citywide so far in June, RedEye found. Police recorded 46 homicides in June last year. RedEye determined. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

Women dominate national primaries

In an election year filled with female candidates, Tuesday turned out to be a big night as two businesswomen captured the Republican nominations for Senate and governor in California, a female state lawmaker prevailed in the GOP Senate primary in Nevada and a South Carolina legislator brushed aside allegations of infidelity to grab the commanding spot in the GOP gubernatorial runoff.

Not to be undone, Arkansas Sen. Blanche Lincoln, a two-term lawmaker, scored a narrow victory over a liberal Democrat in a Democratic primary runoff. She quickly pivoted to taking on Republican Rep. John Boozman.

With fresh November matchups set, Democrats wasted little time propping up three of their most vulnerable Senate incumbents while criticizing their newly minted GOP opponents as too extreme for the country. Republicans returned the criticism as general election campaigns got under way across the

The unpopular Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid now is squaring off against a tea party-backed Republican, Sharron Angle, and the vulnerable California Sen. Barbara Boxer faces Carly Fiorina, the former Hewlett-Packard chief executive.

FIRST FOR CALIFORNIA

This is the first time the California Republican Party has put a woman-much less two-at the top of its ticket, "Career politicians in Sacramento and Washington, D.C., be warned: You now face your worst nightmare-two businesswomen from the real world who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done," said gubernatorial candidate Meg Whitman (above), the billionaire former eBay chief executive.

Meg Whitman won the party's nomination for California governor, and South Carolina state Rep. Nikki Haley outpaced three male rivals in a race for the GOP gubernatorial nomination but, without a majority of votes, heads into a June 22 runoff.

Insurgents kill 4 U.S. troops

BLACKHAWKS DRINK FROM THE CUP AGAIN, END 49-YEAR TITLE DROUGHT

The Stanley Cup. The Blackhawks worked all season for it—from the opening games in Finland to the surprisingly easy sweep of San Jose in the Western Conference finals. On Wednesday, their hard work paid off as they grasped the Cup for the first time since 1961. All they had to do was win on the road in the loud Wachovia Center against the physical Philadelphia Flyers. Yes, it was going to take a little more hard work to claim hockey's ultimate prize. Here's how the Blackhawks fared in their quest. REDEYE

SECOND PERIOD

» Duncan Keith falls to the ice after getting his skate tangled up with Scott Hartnell, resulting in a goal by Flyers captain Mike Richards. Just like that, the Flyers wrestle away the Hawks' grip on the Cup.

Score: Philadelphia, 2, Blackhawks 1

» The refs are getting their money's worth tonight. During four-on-four play, Patrick Sharp launches the puck from near the faceoff dot, and it goes right by Flyers goalie Michael Leighton. The Cup dream is back.

Score: Blackhawks 2, Philadelphia 2

«Andrew Ladd takes a break from RedEye's playoff beardoff and puts the Blackhawks ahead on a deflection of a Niklas Hjalmarsson rocket from just outside the faceoff circle. And again, the Cup is within reach.

Score: Blackhawks 3, Philadelphia 2.

FIRST PERIOD

» Dustin "Big Buff" Byfuglien, on a power play, scores one of the biggest goals of his career, putting the Blackhawks up 1-0 and that much closer to their one goal.

Score: Blackhawks 1, Philadelphia O

» About three minutes after the Hawks goal, the Flyers strike back with a power-play goal of their own to retake the momentum.

Score: Blackhawks 1, Philadelphia 1

VICTORY PARADE OVERTIME Patrick Kane scores an unbelievable goal in OT that even the NBC cameramen could not track. It goes under Leighton's leg and barely stays inside the far post. Kane knew it went in, but it took a second for everyone else to figure it out. And with that, the Cup quest is complete. After 49 years, the Blackhawks are Stanley Cup champions again.

The Hawks' victory parade will begin at 10:30 a.m. Friday at Wacker and Washington and proceed east to Wacker and Michigan, where a rally will be held at 11:30 a.m.

Hjalmarsson's the 'Kart' champ

Chicago Tribune

The long, arduous, intensely competitive journey ended here.

The Blackhawks' "Mario Kart" season is over.

One final tournament concluded Tuesday night, on the eve of Game 6 against the Flyers, as the Hawks closed their last road trip of the year with their most cherished tradition away from home. And how Swede it was.

"Hjalmarsson won it," said Hawks forward Patrick Sharp, referring to young defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson. "He's the champ. I came in second. Hammer is in a league of his own because he's so good, so I like to think that I won the title."

About a dozen Hawks regularly played the popular Wii video game, even going so far as to create their own ranking system based on performance.

"We just continue on and be nerds like that," winger Troy Brouwer said.

Brouwer finished third in the race for the title that, really, was destined to be Hjalmarsson's all along.

"He's a pretty good driver, that's for sure," Brouwer said. "I don't know what it is. He might just sit at home playing by himself.

"He's got a gift. That's for sure. And his gift is 'Mario Kart.'"

Hawks in 'Blades of Glory'

Philly fans do have a sense of humor—and one of them has some decent Photoshop skills.

The reaction to the Tribune's Chris Pronger-in-a-skirt poster has been all over the map.

U.S. Olympic hockey player Angela Ruggiero called it sexist.

Someone on Twitter called it "hilarious."

Chris Pronger, when asked about it, said "Next question!"

The best response/revenge was uploaded to the Tribune's Blackhawks fans gallery: A rework of the "Blades of Glory" movie poster featuring "Patricia Kane" and "Dusty Buffy." TRIBUNE

Live from Philly ...

twitter.com/scottbolohan

RedEye Five on Fiver and columnist Scott Bolohan went to Philadelphia in search of a ticket into Game 6 between the Blackhawks and the Flyers. He got his wish. Once inside, he was immersed in Stanley Cup mania. Here are some of his tweets from throughout the night.

Pregame

- » All the Hawks fans around me are talking about Philly fans. The reaction has ranged from "nightmare" to "really bad."
- » When I was sending that last photo, a Flyers fan told me, "Put your camera away, [a-hole]."
- »Got to my seat. Guy next to me with his kid screamed "Sucks, just like you" to me after every Hawks player was introduced.

First period

- » Hawks power play really sucked the energy out of the place.
- » All 20 Hawks fans here are going wild!
- » Intermission. I can finally breathe. That was the most intense stretch of a sporting event in my life.

Second period

- » Not surprisingly, Flyers seem to disagree with the Hartnell call. They said too many expletives for me to fit in this tweet.
- » I quietly sat down in my seat after that goal and tried to hide. Flyers fans are lunatics when they're happy.
- »Call security!! It's getting ugly. I was just asked if I wanted to leave with one face.

Third period

- The key to not getting killed by Flyer fans is the same as with bears: Don't be an idiot. I'm getting along with some.
- The guys next to me keep asking, "Why?" I think that's a stage of grieving.

Hawk land

vs. defense.

wouldn't be as high.

Cup of knowledge

Know these things about the tourney and you'll be a step ahead of most

JOHANNESBURG Wayne Rooney doesn't look so threatening camped out on the left side of the field, his back to the opposing goalkeeper.

England vs. U.S. 12:30 p.m. Saturday, ABC

If he gets the ball in that spot at the World Cup match Saturday against the U.S., shut your eyes. The U.S. defense should be afraid. Very afraid.

England's burly boxer-turned-striker has made defenses all over Europe look silly with what's become his patented move: a quick spin that will leave Steve Cherundolo dizzy, a cut across the field and, when he gets about 25 yards out, a blistering shot off his right foot.

GOAL!!!!!

Whether you're new to the beautiful game or have filled out a World Cup bracket, here are a few things to watch that will make you sound like an expert:

This U.S. defense is held together by Band-Aids and duct tape. Big, bruising Oguchi Onyewu hasn't played a full game since he tore his left patellar tendon Oct. 14. While he swears he's fit again, he looked like he was playing in slow motion during the World Cup warm-ups. Captain Carlos Bocanegra had hernia surgery May 5, and Jay DeMerit is nursing an abdominal strain.

Lionel Messi, Argentina. The reigning world player of the year seems almost boy-like with his slight build and hair flopping as he runs. Getting the ball transforms him. It sticks to the tip of his shoe as if it's held there with glue. Unlike other players who avoid defenders at all costs, Messi runs right at them, bobbing and weaving his way upfield as if it's his personal obstacle course.

Brazil. When Robinho stops and steps over the ball, it's not a whiff. This little sleight of feet—Portugal's Cristiano Ronaldo does it too—actually is incredibly hard, requiring agility, control and full-speed flair. Few things do more to throw off a defender. Commit to a tackle or try to steal the ball, and a player ends up on his face, the sound of Robinho's laughter wafting through the air as he sambas toward the goal.

Spain. Spain might be the most well-rounded team in the tourney, with third-stringers who could start for any other country. But several of its key players are nursing significant injuries. Forward Fernando Torres and midfielder Cesc Fabregas are coming back from serious leg injuries, as is Andres Iniesta.

» The Big Red will be joining the Big Ten. A source with knowledge of the expansion talks has confirmed to the Tribune that Nebraska will be invited to apply for Big Ten membership.

The league has not determined, the source said, whether it will remain at 12 schools or expand to 14 or 16.

LEBRON WATCH

» Former Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote spoke to Tom Izzo and confirmed his former pupil is intrigued by the idea of coaching LeBron James with the Cleveland Cavaliers, according to the Detroit News. "But unless he can get some commitment from LeBron James, the job isn't that good," Heathcote said.

JIMMY GREEN'S

825 S. State St. 312-386-9000

'Hood: South Loop, on the first floor of a new building Opened: May 26

The look: Contemporary lounge. TVs are mounted everywhere you look (including above each booth in the back), while sculptural glass plates hanging from the high ceilings and metallic details along the bar give the place a slick look.

TV count: 27
Fresh air: Huge windows along the front of the bar slide open on warm nights.
Food & drink highlights:
Globetrot with homemade tamales, pot stickers with plum sauce or chili-laced shrimp with polenta (left), plus create-your-own burgers and pizzas. The beer

Get your cheer on at 3 new sports bars

By Lisa Arnett

As baseball fans get riled up for the Crosstown Classic this weekend and the Blackhawks' season slides to an end, a fresh crop of sports bars have popped up for your viewing pleasure. From the number of TVs to outdoor spaces, we've got all the stats you'll need to consider their MVP potential.

POUR DRINKS & EATS

3358 N. Ashland Ave. 773-472-3358

'Hood: Lakeview, in the former La Taberna Tapatia address

Opened: May 17

The look: No-frills corner tap. The walls are exposed brick, and ladder-back bar stools line the worn-in wooden bar.

TV count: Five inside, two more coming

Fresh air: A backyard beer garden bordered with brick walls and stocked with wicker furniture acts as an alfresco oasis a few steps from busy Ashland Avenue.

Food & drink highlights: Besides traditional buffalo wings, more original eats include a garlicky skirt steak sandwich and grilled cheese with fontina and sage. Summery cocktails span elderflower iced tea and strawberry-basil lemonade, though ours didn't prove strong enough to justify the $9 price tag.

- » River North's Martini Park has closed.
- » The 44th Ward Dinner Party in Lakeview is set to close any day now, but you may not have seen the last of it. Owner Stephen Westman says not to be surprised if the concept pops up elsewhere in the neighborhood in the future.
- » Gilt Bar's cash-only basement cocktail lounge, Curio, will be open Thursday-Sunday starting tonight. Until a full menu of around 30 cocktails is ready for action, the bar will serve the same drinks as upstairs (230 W. Kinzie St. 312-464-9544).

CORK & KERRY AT THE PARK

3258 S. Princeton Ave. 312-842-0769

'Hood: Bridgeport, in the former Jimbo's Lounge address

Opening: Not in time for this weekend's Crosstown Classic as hoped. A grand opening is in the works for mid-June.

The look: Classic pub. A column-backed bar and wooden cabinets give off an old-timey vibe, and the bar's sign integrates the pinwheel motif first built onto the Comiskey Park scoreboard.

TV count: Five

Fresh air: Sidewalk seating along 33rd Street is in the plans for later this summer.

Food & drink highlights: Rotating food and drink specials inspired by the Sox's latest opponents (a salmon dish when the team takes on the Seattle Mariners, for example) will supplement the regular menu of bar food basics.

Nightcrawlers

Seen on the scene at ... Longman & Eagle, 2657 N. Kedzie Ave.

This Logan Square hot spot is working to convert the upstairs area into an inn. We asked around to see who'd consider getting down upstairs.

Heather Rae Cheszek

31, stylist/makeup artist

What's your opinion of bad summer style? Men should stay away from flipflops. No one wants to look at man-feet.

They're adding rooms here. Would you ever meet someone and then go upstairs?

I would go with my committed boyfriend. We actually do hotel nights once every couple of months, so I'd be willing to check it out.

John Aagaard

30, works at Marc Jacobs

What are you drinking? Virginia Lightning. It's a whiskey, kinda like moonshine.

What's the first thing you notice about a woman?Legs. Nice legs are pretty awesome.

Would you ever meet someone and go to the inn upstairs?

My apartment is just a couple blocks away.

Emilie Jaeger 27, musician/ paralegal

What's the story behind the hat? I bought

I bought it today at Vintage Heaven Ithe once-a-month retro clothing sale]. It's an Oscar de la Renta.

What are the rules to wearing a hat?

Anything that you wear, you have to work it. ... There's nothing worse than a bold outfit worn awkwardly.

Indie rock bred Rabbit-style

Michael Danaher wanted to see his garage rock band, Rabbit Children, in RedEye and Metromix, so he answered our Chi-Tunes questionnaire in the "about" section at chicagonow.com/chi-tunes. Do the same and your band could be next!

What makes your live show great?

Lots of energy and different stylings of music. We can rock out or tone it down, and connect all the dots in between. Lots of harmonies too. And new songs that you can't hear on our CD.

Describe your sound in five words or less. Dark indie pop rock

Tell us something random about the band, and why that's significant.

Michael Danaher and Blake Hand-the two lead singers and primary songwriters of Rabbit Children-have been friends since preschool. They grew up together, learning music from each other and playing in various bands with one another since fifth grade. In college, they were in a cover band called Tony Bandza. They also made stupid movies together. One of the movie titles, "Thou Shalt Have a Time Machine," is the title of Rabbit Children's debut CD.

CHI-TUNES

Rabbit Children

With: Secret Cities, Mittens on Strings When: 9 p.m. Monday Where: Subterranean, 2011 W. North Ave. Tickets: $8 at ticketweb.com

Whom would you want to work with, and with whom would you never work? Why?

We'd work with anybody, really. Steve Albini's in Chicago; it would be insane to record with him.

We would never work with Nickleback because we hate their guts. Or Kings of Leon—they suck too. (Although Noah, our drummer, adores them, so if it came down to it we'd probably work with them.) We also hate emo bands. "Die emo die" (respect to the chalkboard at Kuma's Corner).

If the band were a '90s sitcom character, whom would it be and why?

Vampire Weekend is to Frasier Crane as we are George Costanza. Nuff said.

Rhymefest (Rosehip Records/dN|Be Entertainment) Ladies and gentlemen, the real Rhymefest. His 2006 debut, "Blue Collar," felt hesitant, and the Chicago rapper, born Che Smith, never became the next big thing people expected after he won a Best Rap Song Grammy for co-writing Kanye West's "Jesus Walks." A few years later and free to do whatever he wants as dN|Be Entertainment's flagship artist. Rhymefest sounds liberated. "One Arm Push Up" and "Talk My Shit" bounce with a ferociousness rarely found on "Blue Collar," and lyrically, Rhymefest has no problem asserting his independence from Kanye. On "Truth On You," he gives it to his fellow Chicagoan, spitting, "Kanve done take that 'Jesus Walks' money and ran the hell off." "You try to write a book on Twitter and it's a tell-all." Among the highlights is the horn-flavored "Prosperity," in which Rhymefest ruminates on what people are willing to do for security, and the swaggering "Give It To Me," featuring a blazing guest turn from Saigon. Sonically the ability to do whatever he wants backfires in the sense that "El Che" goes a couple steps past "varied" and toward "inconsistent." Even if the hard-edged "Chicago" doesn't fit with the corny "Chocolates," it's cool to see Rhymefest get another chance to do it, and do it his way. -MATT PAIS

Building abetter action hero

Sometimes SIZE matters

There's a kind of safety to be found in knowing that the big guy has your back, and one of the biggest to come along was Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Terminator." That essential indomitable he-man quality was there in Crowe's "Gladiator" and in Butler (left) as he led the "300" on a suicide mission. It's the same kind of grounded gravitas Sam Worthington brought as the man-machine in "Terminator Salvation," in which he was most definitely the savior if not the star. Too big: In a Dolph Lundgren-Steven Seagal toss-up, it's close, but Seagal wins with "The Glimmer Man."

It's even better if they're a little FUNNY

Whoever said saving the day has to be a serious affair? Johnny Depp cuts everything to shreds with his self-deprecating shrugs in "Pirates of the Caribbean"; Robert Downey Jr., whether solving crimes as Sherlock or behind a metal mask in "Iron Man," can't seem to keep the smirk away. Angelina Jolie (left) turns a fashion forward style, a lot of ammo and a wicked wit into great watching whether in "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" or going all Laura Croft on those tomb raiders. Not funny enough: "Bad Boys" 1 & 2's Martin Lawrence. Shouldn't have been funny but was: Benicio Del Toro's "The Wolfman."

Los Angeles Times

Being an action hero might seem easy. Just swagger into some hot spot with sizzling special effects and a cunning smile on your face. That's all it takes to make a testosterone junkie's day, right?

Wrong, as the recent Bruckheimer "Prince of Persia" bust with a buffed-up but bland Jake Gyllenhaal as its star so painfully proved.

The problem: There's no one mold to make or break. It's why actors as diverse as Gerard Butler, Matt Damon, Shia LaBeouf, Robert Downey Jr. and Chris Pine have all found a way to get a line on action central. And why others who would seem a sure thing—Hugh Jackman, Christian Bale and Russell Crowe with bow, to name a few—don't always cut it.

Still the contenders keep coming. On Friday, Bradley Cooper and crew on "The A-Team" battle it out with Jaden Smith and Jackie Chan in "The Karate Kid." Coming soon are Josh Brolin's "Jonah Hex," Tom Cruise in "Knight & Day" and even Michael Cera in "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World."

Here's a look at what actually makes for the right stuff. And remember, in the movies, the guns are just props; in the theaters, it's the audiences who are packing.

Who doesn't fall for the BOY NEXT DOOR?

Tobey Maguire (right) in "Spider-Man" and LaBeouf in "Transformers" completely won us over as reluctant heroes—without the natural size, moxie or macho to get them through the tough times. Not that ordinary: Remember Ben Affleck in "Daredevil"?

"Reindeer Games"? Neither do we.

It helps to be a little CRAZY

The crazy we like come with an unhinged look that never leaves their eyes: Tom Cruise (left) in "Mission: Impossible" and "Top Gun," Mel Gibson's "Lethal Weapon" and "Braveheart" and Michael Keaton's magnificent "Batman." Too unhinged: Nicolas Cage in "Con Air," "The Rock," maybe anything ...

Everyone loves a ROGUE

Some guys just wear arrogance so easily, cocky comes with their walk, to say nothing of a certain way with the ladies. Harrison Ford (above) had it in early "Indiana Jones" and "Star Wars." Pine absolutely had it in "Star Trek." Brad Pitt is never without it. Not slick enough: George Clooney's "Batman."

A little INTENSITY goes a long way

There is something electric about the kind of passion-fueled intensity found in Clint Eastwood's "Dirty Harry" and Damon's Jason Bourne (left). Ironically, that's what tends to drive the women who would be action kings too: Linda Hamilton's buffed Sarah in "The Terminator." the spring-loaded calm of Sigourney Weaver's Ripley in "Aliens." Too tightly wound: Jackman's "Wolverine." Trim the nails and the hair and chill, dude.

Cidd; listen at redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles

Local rapper Cidd's ode to alcohol, "I Stay," narrowly defeated Drunken Monkeee's "Jungle Music" in this week's track-off. Cidd leveraged irreverent lyrics about liquor over a bouncy, whistle-infused instrumental, earning acclaim from the likes of voter "Jeffrey T. Prince," who crowned it a "club banger." ## Jennifer Aniston's secret weapon?

Aniston recently denied reports that she is on the baby-food diet, but there may be another reason for her slim figure. Her friend, Courteney Cox, told the L.A. Times that while shooting "Friends," the two lunched together every day for 10 years. "And we always had the same thing—a Cobb salad." Sounds mindnumbing and annoying, but perhaps Aniston still employs this practice and that's her skinny secret.

TRACY MORGAN

Morgan said he used NutriSystem to ditch some extra pounds. "The most weight I lost was 10 pounds in two weeks," he told usmagazine.com. The "30 Rock" star also does Pilates, and said he lost weight to lower his blood pressure and help control his diabetes.

BETHENNY FRANKEL

Frankel, of "The Real Housewives of New York City," recently told usmagazine.com that she lost 29 pounds three weeks after giving birth. Critics blasted her for losing weight so quickly, but she insists she didn't crash-diet. Her baby weighed 4 pounds—do the math.

50 CENT

The rapper recently shed 60 pounds and became a mere shell of himself for a movie role as a cancer-stricken football player. Fortunately, he has been putting the weight back on and looking healthier these days.

CHRISTIAN BALE

Bale dropped down to a frightening 120 pounds for his role in "The Machinist" in 2004. After production wrapped, he had to put on about 85 pounds to play Bruce Wayne in "Batman Begins." He has said coffee and apples were the key to the loss.

MATT DAMON

Damon survived on only a plain baked potato, egg whites and a piece of chicken each day while getting gaunt for 1996's "Courage Under Fire." He lost 40 pounds in about three months to play a heroin-addicted soldier.

Tom Cruise's foul-mouthed producer, Les Grossman, is getting his own film. On Wednesday, Paramount and MTV films confirmed they've greenlit a spinoff film centered on Grossman, the hilarious (or irritating) character Cruise played in 2008's "Tropic Thunder" and reprised at Sunday's MTV Movie Awards.

Hayes' needle is stuck

Sean Hayes wasn't about to discuss a recent Newsweek piece that slammed his performance in "Promises, Promises." "I'm excited to be hosting the Tonys and hopefully everybody will have a good time," Hayes answered repeatedly as reporters on a conference call Wednesday tried to get him to discuss the controversial piece that said gay people do not convincingly play straight characters. Hayes will host the Tony Awards on Sunday on CBS.

Celebrity sightings

Vince Vaughn is all over this town. The adorable actor and big-time Hawks fan was spotted walking along Michigan Avenue on Tuesday night. Meanwhile, in a higher place Tuesday night was Kanye West, who celebrated his 33rd birthday with a private party at Vertigo Sky Lounge on the 26th floor of the Dana Hotel & Spa. He was joined by girlfriend Amber Rose, Common and Lupe Fiasco, the Tribune's Luis Arroyave reports.

In a casting move that could make indie kids' and comedy fans' heads explode, Elizabeth Banks, Zooey Deschanel, Emily Mortimer and Rashida Jones have joined Paul Rudd in "My Idiot Brother." The project is directed by former Lemonheads member Jesse Peretz. The movie is about an idealist dealing with his overbearing mother who crashes at the homes of his three ambitious sisters, The Hollywood Reporter says.

"I don't go 'tanning' tanning anymore because Obama put a 10 percent tax on tanning and I feel like he did that intentionally for us. [Sen. John] McCain would never put a 10 percent tax on tanning—because he's pale and he would probably want to be tan."

—Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi on why she doesn't go to tanning salons anymore. A sneak peak of the new season of "Jersey Shore" is available at mtv.com.

"Ur right, I would never tax your tanning bed! Pres Obama's tax/spend policy is quite The Situation. but I do rec wearing sunscreen!" —Sen. John McCain, responding on his official Twitter page to Snooki's quote.
